

How Kaye Wilkins Sold Her Westmoreland Home To Escape Debt and Rebuild Her Life

Unexpected debt and personal loss can make homeownership feel like a burden. When the house no longer fits your life or your budget, selling your house becomes the only practical way forward. In this post, you'll read a case study about how Kaye Wilkins sold her house to pay off debt, escape financial pressure, and start fresh.

Kaye's Difficult Situation

Kaye lived alone in her Westmoreland home after losing her husband, sister, and stepson. The house held painful memories and needed major repairs she couldn't afford. She owed $27,000 in personal debt and faced utility shutoffs. Her fixed income no longer covered basic expenses, which forced her to look for a way out.

Kaye chose to sell the house to pay off debt and move in with trusted friends. But finding someone who would buy the home quickly, without repairs or delays, felt impossible.

How We Helped Her Move Forward

Kaye knew she wanted to sell her house to pay off debt, but she didn't know who to trust or how to begin. She worried that her home's condition would scare buyers away.

We met with her in person, walked through the home, and explained every step clearly and respectfully. Her property still held home equity, which allowed us to build a fair cash offer. We timed the closing around her utility deadlines and let her choose her move-out date. The sale gave her immediate financial relief, freedom from repairs and fees, and the support she needed to move forward.

How Kaye's Life Changed After Working With My Tennessee Home Solution

The day Kaye closed on her home, everything changed. The sale gave her the freedom to breathe and finally take control of her finances. She used the funds as a focused debt management strategy, clearing $27,000 in personal loans. She also completed a final mortgage payoff, wiping out the last of her housing debt.

Selling her house to pay off debt gave her security, peace of mind, and a clean break from years of financial stress. She moved into a stable home with close friends, surrounded by support.

What Kaye Had To Say

Kaye found that downsizing for debt gave her the fresh start she needed.

“I was drowning in debt and knew I was about to lose my home if I didn't do something. That's when I reached out to My Tennessee Home Solution, and they completely changed everything for me. The process went way better than I ever expected- no hiccups, no stress, just exactly what I hoped for and more. If I had to do this all over again, I wouldn't hesitate. I'd choose them every time." - Kaye Wilkins.

Does Kaye's Story Sound Familiar? Here's What To Do Next

If you're feeling overwhelmed by debt, take Kaye's story as a sign that there's a way through it. Selling a house to pay off debt gave her a fresh start when she had no other way out.

If you're in a similar situation, contact My Tennessee Home Solution. Call (615) 933-5431 or email info@mytennesseehomesolution.com to start the process of selling your home.